LAVAL ULTIMATUM WARNS MUSSOLINI AGAINST ATTACKS

Action Definitely Closes
Door to Italian Hopes for Delay in Application of World Embargo on Oil for II Duce.

LEAGUE WILL ACT
AT DEC. 12 PARLEY

Unprovoked Assault on British Ships in Mediterranean To Be Considered
One Upon France.

By CHARLES P. NUTTER.
(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press.)
LONDON, Nov. 29.—A virtual ultimatum to Premier Benito Mussolini from Premier Pierre Laval of France, warning him officially to refrain from unprovoked attack on Great Britain in the Mediterranean sea, was received in authoritative British quarters tonight.

Laval told II Duce's ambassador directly, these sources said, that France could consider such an attack to be a attack on France.

(Paris) dispatches said M. Laval's action on the subject of an unprovoked sea attack against Great Britain had wrecked Italian hopes for further delay in a League of Nations' embargo against the fascist king.

High quarters, professing no alarm over reports of mysterious Italian war movements, simultaneously expressed the opinion that oil sanctions against Italy would be applied quickly following upon the December 12 meeting of the League of Nations' sanctions committee to discuss such an embargo.

The French premier, informed sources said, delivered his tacit ultimatum to the Italian ambassador, Vittorio Cerruti, after a conference with Sir George Russell Clerk, the ambassador from Great Britain.

Clerk, it was disclosed, asked M. Laval to give Italy a straightforward reminder that all members of the League of Nations are standing together to resist attacks.

This, as a matter of fact, was a reaffirmation of previous agreements between Great Britain and France. But its importance, observers said, lay in the fact that this time the French statement was direct and official.

A communiqué submitted to the committee on the matter of the oil embargo. The project also contemplates addition of coal, iron and steel to the "key products" which are denied to Italy because they might become sinews of war.

ANNE EDEN, Great Britain's minister for League affairs, is expected to represent the United Kingdom at the committee of 18 meeting in Geneva two weeks hence.

OIL EMBARGO DELAY
OBVIATED BY FRANCE

PARIS, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Premier Pierre Laval's direct support of the safety of the British Mediterranean fleet has dashed Italian hopes of delay in League of Nations oil embargo, informed sources said.

Thus the Italo-Ethiopian crisis has been advanced to a decisive stage, these persons said. Already an important Italian authority has been quoted here as saying addition of the oil embargo to the present economic siege against Italy would soon make continuation of the African war "impossible."

Informed sources said M. Laval, yielding to the representations of the British ambassador, Sir George Russell Clerk, let Italian Ambassador Vittorio Cerruti know France would

'You and I Will Not Forget the Long Struggle--' Roosevelt Tells His Georgia Neighbors at Home-Coming

A brisk north wind that swept across Grant field yesterday, bringing a chilling blast of 46-degree weather, was ignored by President Franklin D. Roosevelt as he tossed aside hat and overcoat and discussed today and yesterday in America, with 40,000 who had packed every corner of the stadium to greet him, 40,000 more who arrived too late and stood in the streets outside listening to the speech through loud speakers, and thousands upon thousands more who gathered around radios at home and in offices to hear a two-sided discussion of the problems of the rich and the poor that face the nation. The President read in his usual crisp, clear tones from a paper on which he had summarized the main problems of the country and he spared none of his critics who dispute his policy of spending money for jobs, instead of a dole. This remarkable picture shows the President as he faced his immense audience. A section of the huge crowd is in the background. Staff photos by Kenneth Rogers and George Cornett.

'Ramblin' Wreck' Spirit Pervades Sloping Reaches of Grant Field

Running Story of Roosevelt Day Crowds by Ralph McGill Brings Typical Georgian, Southern and American Atmosphere of Crowds to Print.

By RALPH MCGLL.

They came early, in small concrete sections of Grant field yesterday to await the arrival and the speech of Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America.

Workers were still busy with the wires in the press box shortly after 7 o'clock in the morning when the youth came to the platform on the concrete steps of the south end of the stadium, took seats high on the rim of the stadium, a blanket about their knees and fur collars turned high. It was a full hour before the President left Warm Springs when they took their places for the long wait.

The south wall of the stadium was decorated with flags and bunting. And from the rim six American flags caught the morning sun, making an instant glow of the silken ripples.

That flag has come a long, long way since Francis Scott Key waited the dawn's early light to see if its stars were still there.

Stadium Weli Decorated.

Decorations extended all around the stadium.

Immediately below the speakers' platform, built on the concrete steps of the south end of the stadium, were the rows of benches for newspapermen covering the event. With them were sections for the radiomen to broadcast the speech.

On the cinder running track immediately below the south section a tall

20,000 CHILDREN GREET ROOSEVELT

Young Georgians Pledge Allegiance for President in Piedmont Park.

By FRANK DRAKE.

School boys and girls of Georgia, approximately 20,000 strong, cheered President Roosevelt yesterday in Piedmont Park.

Amidst flag-waving and cheering, the chief executive of the United States greeted the young and adult visitors to the park.

He saluted to all the boys and girls within the state.

Arriving at the park a few minutes behind the scheduled time of 12:20 o'clock, the presidential party, escorted by squads of motorized police, rolled through Piedmont park to the Twelfth street park entrance and came to a stop at the flag-decorated peace commemoration statue.

Oath of Allegiance.

As the car bearing the President drove up, nearly 20,000 young voices were raised in the stirring tune of "America." Then the children took the oath of allegiance to the flag.

Police Calls Drop To Half of Average

Atlantaans were on their "party nerves" Thanksgiving day yesterday.

Despite the opportunity for conviviality and downright carousing, in spite of the large crowds of out-of-town visitors and the resultant confusion, the work of the police department, when checked early this morning, showed that the volume of calls sent over the police radio system had dropped, for the two days to about half of the usual number.

The average number of radio calls between 4 o'clock in the afternoon and 12 o'clock midnight is between 40 and 50. Last night there were only 25, officers said.

During his parade through the heart of the city from the fort to Piedmont park, the chief executive was greeted from the school children in a manner that he was cheered by nearly 200,000 people while, in addition to those in Grant field, he was hailed by tremendous crowds in Piedmont park and at Atlanta University, the throng at the last named place being almost entirely negroes.

Governor Talmadge, leading critic of the Roosevelt administration, was absent from the stadium. He was at his farm in Telfair county hunting and "looking for something to plant on which there is no processing tax." But if the President can take the hundreds of thousands of Georgians who cheered him en route to the field and at the stadium for granted, Georgia again will be in the Roosevelt column in 1936.

500,000 See, Hear F. D. R.

The Roosevelt Home-coming Celebration, designed by the Georgia delegation in congress to assure the President that his supporters in Georgia and the surrounding states are in full support of his program was pronounced a full success. From the time the President reached Fort McPherson until he left after his five-hour visit it was estimated that nearly 500,000 people, the goal set by the committee in charge had set, had seen and heard him.

In his parade through the heart of the city from the fort to Piedmont park, the chief executive was greeted from the school children in a manner that he was cheered by nearly 200,000 people while, in addition to those in Grant field, he was hailed by tremendous crowds in Piedmont park and at Atlanta University, the throng at the last named place being almost entirely negroes.

Although the President was expected, in some quarters, to formally open his campaign for re-election in his Atlanta speech he made no direct declaration of his intentions but after reviewing the accomplishment of his administration he said that the present program would be continued if "I have anything to do with it."

To some observers this was tantamount to the formal announcement of his candidacy for re-election and when he made that statement he was met with the greatest cheer of the entire day, a cheer which halted his speech for several minutes.

In his leaden speech, Roosevelt covered practically all of the achievements of the New Deal, called the five years of mushroom prosperity before the regime of Hoover a "fool's paradise," the Hoover administration "four years of gloom" and drew a

Roosevelt Lists Achievements And Tells Aims in Speech Here

The full text of President Roosevelt's address in Grant field here yesterday, in which he reviewed the accomplishments of his administration and detailed his aims for the future, follows in full:

I am happy to be in Georgia. I am proud of Georgia. Happy because of the moving reception which my friends, the Georgia people, gave me. The good people of this state have responded to such warmth and hospitality. Happy because I meet again so many old friends and neighbors. Proud because I see signs on every hand that the overwhelming majority of the people of this state are keeping pace with the millions of others throughout the nation who believe in progress, are willing to work for progress and are going to get progress. Proud because I see clear signs of a revival of material prosperity in country and in city, and especially because a swelling majority of the spirit that spells a greater hap and a deeper happiness for our fellowmen.

Orgy of Prosperity.

Eleven years ago I came to live at Warm Springs for the first time. That was a period of great so-called prosperity. But I would not go back to the conditions of 1924, and I do not believe that you people would want to go back either. Of the year and of the five years that followed, there is no record which you can verify for yourselves. In that orgy of "prosperity" a wild speculation was building speculative profits for the speculators and preparing the way for the public to be left "holding the bag." In that orgy of "prosperity" banks, individual and by chains, were closing their doors at the expense of the depositors. In that orgy of "prosperity" the farmers of the south had become involuntary speculators themselves, never certain whether they planned for the crops or whether they would bring 25 cents or 15 cents or 5 cents. In that orgy of "prosperity" the poorest vied with the richest in throwing their earnings and their savings into a cauldron of land and stock speculation. In that orgy of "prosperity" slum conditions went unheeded, because there was no room for gotten usurious interest charges, mounted child labor continued, starvation wages were too often the rule instead of the exception. Mammon ruled America.

Fool's Paradise Years.

Those are the years to remember—those fool's paradise years before the crash came. Too much do we harp on the years that followed, when from 1929 to 1933 this nation slipped downward—ever downward to the inevitable point when the mechanics of civilization came to a dead stop on March 3, 1933.

You and I need not rehearse the four years of disaster and gloom. We know the simple fact that at the time when America acted before it was too late, that we learned about and by a supreme, well-nigh unanimous national effort, started on the upward path again.

Honest Work Wanted.

Most Americans want to give something for what they get. That something, in this case honest work, is the saving barrier between them and mass destitution. We propose to build that barrier higher.

Last April I stated what I have held to consistently ever since—that it was the hope of the administration that by sometime in November of this year we would substantially end the dole and offer in place its replacement by far the greatest part of the three and a half million employable persons we estimated to be on the relief roles in the United States.

Week after week since then some individuals and some groups, careless of the truth and regardless of scruples, have sought to make the American people believe that this program could not possibly succeed.

Goal Accomplished.

Today is the twenty-ninth day of November. It gives me a certain satisfaction to be able to inform you, and through you the nation, that on Wednesday, two days ago, there were three million one hundred and twenty-five thousand persons on various relief projects throughout the nation. The small remaining number have received orders to report to work on projects already underway or ready to be started.

This result, I believe, will agree with me, constitutes a substantial and successful national achievement.

Aside from the tremendous increase in the work force, in increase of pay, in the substitution of work for a dole, there is the practical side of permanent material benefit.

Within sight of us today stands a tribute to useful work under government supervision—the first slum clearance and low-rent housing project.

Social Security.

You and I yes, every individual and every family in the land—are being brought close to that supreme achievement of the present congress—the social security law which, in due course, will provide the nation with a system of insurance for the unemployed and will extend well-merited care to sick and crippled children.

You and I are enlisted today in a great crusade, every part of the land to cooperate with me in making no more excitement than was created when Miss Mint arrived with a supply of crisp new dollars, in search of Wrigley users and their opinions of Wrigley's gum. The Yellow Jackets were found well prepared for our invasion and a large number of the student body were paid new dollars for their opinions after being approached by Miss Mint. In this column there are listed a few of the prepared students who received new dollar bills.

YEARS PROVE QUALITY.

GOKE W. WENZEL, 1101 So. Ave. S. E., received his new dollar and made this statement: "I had several brands of gum while serving in France, which I saved as keepsakes. Wrigley's are the only brands which have retained their flavor and texture for 17 years. The other makes have evaporated and only the wraps remain."

Governor's Choice.

GOVERNOR EUGENE TALMADGE, when approached by Miss Mint, produced a package of Wrigley P. K.'s and said we told him his opinion: "The delicious peppermint flavor of P. K. is even better than the sweet gum I chewed when I was a boy."

Miss Mint and I will mention a few of the Wrigley users in our column every day. Look for your name or a friend's name and receive a Wrigley dollar for their opinion of Wrigley's gum in the partial list of the prepared users which follows:

In this connection it is, I think, of interest to point out that national surveys prove that the average of our citizenship lives today on what would be called a medical fraternity a third-class diet. If the country lived on a second-class diet, they would need to put many more acres under cultivation to feed the rest of the nation. The food surplus is now so great that we have ever cultivated into the production of an additional supply of things for Americans to eat.

Purchasing Power Needed.

We are living in a world in which, following up this particular illustration, are we living on a third-class diet?

For the very simple reason that the masses of the American people have not got the purchasing power to eat more and better food.

It takes a few weeks ago that farm income in the United States has risen since 1933, a total of about three billions. That is because wheat is selling at better than 90 cents instead of 32 cents; corn at 50 cents instead of 12 cents; cotton at 12 cents instead of 4 or 12 cents, and other crops in proportion. I wonder what cotton would be selling at tomorrow if we were to increase the acreage by fifteen or sixteen million bales each year, adding to our own surplus, adding to the world surplus, and driving the cotton farmers of the south into bankruptcy and starvation. The additional three billions of farm income has meant the reduction of the cost of the production of cloth factories, the doubling of automobile production, the improvement of transportation and the giving of new employment to millions of people.

Warded Off Starvation.

That brings us squarely face to face with the fact of the continued heat the irritated tissues as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled. Druggists also know the effectiveness of Beechwood Creosol and they rank Creosol top for coughs because you get a real dose of Creosote in Creosol, emulsified so that it is palatable, digestible and potent for going to the very seat of the trouble.

Creosol is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of colds, the doubling of automobile production, the improvement of transportation and the giving of new employment to millions of people.

Warded Off Starvation.

In order to get their further judgment, however, I asked them what they thought the maximum national debt of the United States government could rise to without serious danger to the national credit. Their answers, remember this was in the spring of 1933, were that the country could safely stand a national debt of 100 billion dollars.

The senior Georgia senator also praised Key, Cocks and Edgar Dunlap, who was associated with Cocks in mapping the local celebration program.

The supply of dollar bills is holding out perfectly. We have enough to keep us busy for a long time yet. So don't be downhearted if you have not yet been stopped. Just continue to enjoy Wrigley's gum, and be prepared by having an open package when Miss Mint, or one of our assistants, stop you to give you a new Wrigley dollar.—(adv.)

DECEMBER FINANCING TO HIKE PUBLIC DEBT

U. S. Borrowing May Boost to All-Time High, More Than 30 Billion.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The treasury's December borrowing plan—to be announced Monday—will probably add $10,000,000,000 to the public debt above $30,000,000,000.

The extent of the rise depended, of course, on how much new borrowing, as distinguished from the refunding of maturing securities, was intended. For the time being the figure was carefully guarded.

However, some who follow the situation cabled that, in the light of the treasury's current cash position, the amount might run to $30,000,000,000, which would carry the debt to another all-time peak of more than $30,000,000,000. It stood today at $29,553,000,000.

Possibly preparing the public mind for the announcement, President Roosevelt, speaking in Atlanta, said that early in his administration the banknotes in circulation in the country "could safely stand a national debt of between $35,000,000,000 and $70,000,000,000."

At the same time, he asserted he had no idea of running the debt to any such figure. He told the bankers, he said, "that only a moderate increase in the debt for the next few years" could easily and justly be added:

"That objective holds good today."

(Since his administration began, he said, the debt has risen from $21,000,000,000 to $29,000,000,000, the latter figure not taking into consideration a cash balance which was nearly $1,500,000,000 and receivable assets $4,500,000,000.)

Today's treasury statement, however, showed the working balance at $1,051,000,000, its lowest point in a number of months. This factor furnished the principal basis of predictions that new borrowings might run to $500,000,000.

For nine months, the treasury has been issuing new money by issuing $10,000,000 a week in treasury bills, against weekly maturities of $50,000,000, thus supplying itself with $50,000,000 of new cash each week.

Recent refinancing programs have given investors a chance between a medium and long term issue. While the details of the refinancing announcement were kept secret, indications pointed to a continuance of this practice.

Stallings Declares Ethiopian War Greek's Biggest Boon in Centuries

Hellenes Possessed of Contraband Munitions Retire to Life of Ease in Macedonia; Writer's Ambition Is To Find Eight Shells for Pre-Napoleon Pistols.

By LAURENCE STALLINGS.
(Copyright, 1935, by North American News-Paper Alliance, Inc.)

Harar, Ethiopia, Nov. 29.—Now that every man, beggar and man-child of Ogaden province possesses a rifle, the sale of cartridges to the Ethiopians has become a Greek's boon.

The Greek nation has received since the battle of Marathon.

Press correspondents were accustomed to meet the Ethiopian willingness of two Ethiopians to swap cartridges upwards of eight hours a day, while waiting for the Greeks to clean up the mountain with a load of wood. However, the surest way to discover a white man's business in Ethiopia is by observing the movement of his hands when he is at ease. If he is gently spilling cartridges from palm to palm, it is proof that he has a deadly automatic.

The day is approaching the new cooperation between Ethiopia and Japan, and that he is a famous correspondent.

The average famous correspondent, arriving at Djibouti, usually carried a small arsenal carefully selected from the better London gunsmiths. The last to leave Djibouti, though ordered from a mysterious European vendor called curiously enough, the League of Nations, instantly seized the weapons and munitions, explaining, as only the French can, that this League, out of its wisdom, had decreed that the writing and photographing gentry must enter without weapons a country where belligerent teeth on sharpen rings.

Strong Coincidences.

The League assured the visitor that he need not arrive at Addis Ababa and inscribe a note to the minister of war . . . but there the matter has rested ever since; and the finest stock of sporting weapons in the modern world now rusts in the torrid miasma of Djibouti.

With the advent of war, the sale of contraband cartridges by aliens became a serious matter; so serious that all the Armadians and Greeks possessing these contrabands have retired to hotels in Macedonia, comfortably well off, with not a mortgage anywhere on the property.

It has now been agreed upon, lessening government officials to sell contraband to writers who, between givings at the ex-Greek hotels, confidently expect to join the Ethiopians at the front. As they see the situation warrants arms, the average journalist possesses a Belgian, Russian or Finnish pistol which last burned an officer's fingers at Djibouti. It is his obsession to eight cartridges which will reasonably go into the chamber of the weapon.

Since the outbreak of hostilities, the Ethiopian government has been permitted to buy the English munitions which, by the veriest good luck, happened to be piled up in the heart of Asia. These, by another good stroke, proved to be ammunition for German type Mauser rifles which (again coincidence being stronger in life than in fiction) was made in England. While this ammunition store proved ideal for the Ethiopians, their weapons being Mausers only.

Bulgarian make, it immediately knocked the bottom out of the gunrunning market. And the gun-runners had imported all manner and brands of cartridges.

Danger of Suicide.

Thus the correspondents, hourly expecting to go frontwards, have been considerably pressed to find another home. No one, indeed, died in Macedonia in 1887 for the Novgorod automatic of 1867 are being imported into the country. Each correspondent who fires such a one at the hyenas around the garbage pails at Papadokoskes lessens the chance for one of his fellows to sustain a self-inflicted wound and thus a much-reduced supply of sensational action pictures and eye-witness accounts of battles which are safely 300 miles from where the correspondent sits thrilling cartridges through his fingers.

In steel and wheat. He entered voluntary bankruptcy more than a year ago in New York and later was suspended from trading in the Chicago grain market. His application for reinstatement, made last March, is pending.

In the bankruptcy proceedings it was disclosed he had set up $100,000 trust funds for each of his sons, Jesse Jr.'s trust fund is tied up in the state of California.

Jesse Jr. was described by Sheriff Ross as "more or less incorrigible." The officer said the boy recently left the Dear school in Montecito and entered the Laguna Blanca school an exclusive private institution.

Livermore's first wife was Miss Ned Jordan, of Indianapolis. They were married in 1900 and divorced in 1917.

The former Miss Wendt married Livermore in December, 1918. A Reno divorce ended this union in 1932. Mrs. Livermore then married Walter Longenecker of New York, former prohibition agent. At divorce, in August, he ended this marriage and she resumed the Livermore name.

EXPECT EARLY ARREST OF HOLD UP SUSPECT

Hideout of Man Charged With Shooting Patrolman Known, Say Detectives.

The whereabouts of the bandit suspect who shot and wounded an Atlanta patrolman following the hold-up of a grocery store is known and his capture is imminent, police revealed yesterday.

According to detectives, the man, who has eluded a widespread hunt since Wednesday afternoon, when he shot Radio Patrolman L. P. Jones, is hiding in a nearby town.

Detectives declined to reveal the name of the town, but said they expect to trap and capture the suspect soon.

It was also revealed that DeKalb county police yesterday found the remains of a fire in a wooded section of the county, believed to have been built by the suspect last night.

Meanwhile, the residence of Radio Patrolman Jones, who suffered wounds of the head when two shots were fired at him from a shotgun, was reported as improved at Crawford W. Long Memorial hospital.

Police are also still holding for investigation Mrs. R. L. George, 17, of a Piedmont avenue address, wife of the alleged suspect, and her sister, Miss Mildred May, 15, of Greenville, S. C., and are investigating a report George allegedly married a young Atlanta girl three days prior to marrying the young woman held by police.

The suspect's vivid career of crime so far includes a shooting, kidnapping, three holdups and three automobile accidents, according to police, all of which have occurred since noon Wednesday when he robbed the grocery store of $150.

Modestly disclaiming any credit for her part in attempts to capture the suspect, Mrs. Lee D. Davis, 27, Fifth street, N. W., an employee of the grocery, who followed the bandit six blocks in her car immediately after the holdup, said yesterday:

"I wasn't being brave, but I'm a lot more scared now than I was then."

INDIAN SINGER SUES CHICAGO CITY OPERA

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(AP)—A suit for $30,000 against the Chicago City Opera Company and Paul Longone, its general manager, was filed today by Mrs. Doris Maud Underwood of Kankakee City, Chickasaw Indian opera singer.

She charged Longone agreed to engage her this season but later refused to carry out his agreement unless she paid $5,500.

Mrs. Underwood, who has sung as Princess Pakani, said the opera doors were closed to her after she had spent a large sum for special coaching.

PERSIAN ENVOY PLANS TO PROTEST ARREST

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Independent over a "run-in" with a town policeman at Elkhorn, Md., Ghaffar Khan Djalal, Persian minister to the United States, planned today to send a formal protest to federal officials at Washington.

The diplomat was arrested and paroled at Elkhorn Wednesday when his chauffeur drove through the town in case.

Djalal, who later was released from the charge of speeding, said he told his arresting officer, Jacob Biddle, he was immune to arrest, but that Biddle's reply was a command to "shut your mouth."

Mrs. Djalal also joined in the explanation with a denial that she struck Biddle with a walking stick.

Safe Driving Pledge

In the interest of accident prevention and safer conditions on the highways and in co-operation with the Safety Council of The Atlanta Constitution, I am making the following pledge:

1. To drive at moderate speed and on own side of road.
2. Not to pass cars on curves or hills.
3. To stop at stop signs.
4. Not to jump traffic lights.
5. In city traffic to be particularly watchful for pedestrians stepping into the line of traffic from parked cars.
6. Always to give hand signals showing my intention of turning to the left, to the right, or stopping, and not to leave the curb from a parked position without giving a signal.
7. To be fair to other drivers in all respects and to refrain from reckless driving.

The Safety Council of THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

Fill out and mail this pledge to the Safety Council of The Atlanta Constitution, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of windshield stickers.

Pedestrians, Bicycle Riders Urged To Obey All Traffic Regulations

Careless pedestrians and bicycle riders who break traffic rules receive a bit of "scratching" in letters received yesterday by The Constitution. The campaign has won drivers, without trying to evade their own responsibility, are complaining that pedestrians run unnecessary chances and are responsible for a large number of deaths and injuries contained annually in the appalling casualty list from accidents.

The taxicab drivers, who have signed the Safe Driving pledge and are in constant regard for safety, wrote the Safety Council yesterday with suggestions as to the cause of many accidents and means of remedy. They deplored the habit of bicyclists who ride on the wrong side of the street; cut across streets in the middle of the block and cross under a red light.

Taxicab drivers identified themselves as L. W. Hammond and Leslie C. Kent.

Pedestrians' Pledge. A Pedestrians' Safety Pledge is suggested by the two drivers, along the lines of the Safe Driving pledge.

Here is their pledge or portion of it: "In interest of accident prevention and safer conditions on the highways and in co-operation with the Safety Council of The Atlanta Constitution, I am making the following pledge:

"1. To obey traffic lights.

"2. To walk, not run, across streets at intersections.

"3. Not to cross streets in middle of block.

"4. To stand on pavement until traffic light turns green, thus allowing traffic near curb a chance to get away.

"5. To stop, look and listen before stepping into line of traffic from behind parked cars."

Those who are safe and sane will mean a lot to the pedestrian. To disregard them may mean something else—death or painful and mutilating injury. Any safety council that has studied traffic accidents will tell you that a large number of accident deaths and injuries are caused by pedestrains stepping suddenly in the path of an automobile.

Members of the local chapter, which will be host to the conclave, include Lewis Loeb, council chief; Ralph Reisman, Sam Dreyfus, Herman Geierman, Nathan Wolfe, Herbert Rosenblatt, Stanley Marienthal, Harold Ellman, Eugene Diamond and Herbert Constantz.

Affiliated with the local chapter are Morris Fleisher, of Opelika, Ala.; Irving Wender, of Roanoke, Ala., and Leonard Lesser, of Rome. Delegates also are expected from Birmingham, Louisville and Chattanooga.

WOMEN PLAN TO ASK EQUAL RIGHTS IN U.S.

Feminine Leaders Gather To Fight for 18-Word Addition to Constitution.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Feminine leaders gathered tonight to battle for an 18-word addition to the United States constitution.

The addition, "men and women shall have equal rights throughout the United States and every place subject to its jurisdiction," would constitute the 22d amendment, granting to women the equal citizenship which the Nation Women's Party now contends is denied them.

The proposed amendment will be the chief topic at the party's two-day convention next week.

At a rally, Mrs. Helen Hunt West, of Jacksonville, Fla., vice chairman of the party congressional committee, declared there were 1,000 state laws plus the federal economy act's "marriage clause" which deprive women of the right to earn livelihood.

She branded present laws regulating women's wages and hours as "restrictive, not protective."

"Women's salaries in the economic field exceed the work of the work and not upon sex," she said.

"You never find a group of men trying to pass legislation to say women can't work 24 hours a day in the home; it's only when they begin to compete with us that such protective bills are passed."

Miss West has been an ardent feminist since, as a young college graduate, she picketed the White House for a suffrage law.

The same court sentenced Jose Fernandez to serve a year in prison on a similar charge.

5 CUBAN STUDENTS SENTENCED AS REDS

HAVANA, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Miss University of Havana, 1935, Irene Echevarria Menocal, and five other students of the university, three of them girls, were sentenced today to serve six months in prison on charges of seditions propaganda.

The others were Alicia Mendez Lopez, Hortensia Rodriguez Valdes and Luisa Valdes, girls, and Orlando Fernandez De Castro and Rolando Roja De Grava Peralta.

They were accused of throwing a package of handbills advocating overthrow of the government, from the automobile in which they were arrested. They claimed they found them in the vehicle and threw them out to get rid of them.

The same court sentenced Jose Fernandez to serve a year in prison on a similar charge.

Tech's Jackets Burn Bulldog at Bonfire

Yellow Jackets buzzed in a wild dance around a bonfire at Rose Bowl field last night as Georgia Tech students burned the effigy of the Georgia bulldog to show their disdain for the ancient gridiron rival which they meet at Grant field this afternoon.

For several weeks freshmen have been scouring the city to get material for the pyre. Last night collegians danced like primitive tribesmen at the Georgia bulldog went down in flames. Then they cheered yells and cheers. There followed pep talks. Then, as the fire burned low, fireworks shot into the night.

Climaxing the ceremonies was a parade. Members of the Yellow Jacket club urged freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors down Peachtree street through the heart of the city and then back to the school again, to await the outcome of this afternoon's game.

MIGHTY ROAR GREETS PRESIDENT DOWNTOWN

Thousands Wave Greeting
To President in Downtown Atlanta

By LAMAR Q. BALL.

Discordant sputters from a fleet of motorcycles, a brief pause—

Then a mighty roar from thousands of throats came rolling along down Peachtree Street, across Five Points and up Peachtree—

Patient early comers and ingenious late comers pressing hard against the ropes that held them in the front ranks on the curbs; their less fortunate and more timid fellow citizens in the rear ranks pressed back against the store windows on the side, necks stretched to dangerous limits—

Banners, hats, handkerchiefs and empty hands waving, ticker tape and handmade confetti swirling down from office windows and the roofs of buildings, adventurous groups atop theater marques, clapping perlustrous to gaily wire; infants and small children above the heads of the masses by energetic and determined parents, cheering crowds on window sills, five, 10, 15 stories above the street level, holding on with one hand and wildly waving the other, indifferent only risking their lives—

"There he is! There he is!"

The President, through Five Points, was passing through Five Points. It was 12:10 o'clock. Everyone had a date to meet him there at about 11:50 o'clock and he was 20 minutes late, but nobody cared.

The automobile bearing the President and Mrs. Roosevelt rolled along a 15-mile gait along the route between thousands of planters, the President braving again the brisk north wind, into which he was headed, waving his hat in response to the roars of approval and welcome that swept in on him from all sides, with his face wrinkled in the familiar lines of that famous Roosevelt smile.

Secret Service on Guard.

Ahead of the presidential car came police cars, army cars, motorcycle policemen. Then a gap in the line and an automobile, packed with secret service agents, followed, standing on each running board, ready for action, ready to leap off into the crowds at the slightest discordant note in that mighty chorus of approval.

But the secret service men were needed in downtown Atlanta yesterday, or anywhere else along the route. It was just a bare bones of time, the actual face for those crowds, but no one was disappointed. They had seen the President. They were happy and contented.

They sent him on along his path to the home-coming ceremony at Grant Field, satisfied that the average voter who makes up the important multitude, sincerely approved of his down-to-earth, plain speaking other home."

Crowds Well-Behaved.

Preparations for the drive of the President through downtown Atlanta were thorough and faultless. Not even a minor incident bobbed up to spoil the demonstration. Streets were packed with parked cars; crowds stood to the sidewalk, jammed as they were for hours in the heat, watching other demonstrations for a unanimous volume of welcome and approval. Police officers and officers from the 22nd infantry at McPherson walked calmly back and forth, with nothing to arouse the known violence of police temperament.

The crowd stood behind the ropes by the police and army details stood to maintain the streets.

From far out Whitehall along the line downtown distanced up Peachtree, standing space was at a premium by 11:30 o'clock. The crowds stretched back into all the side streets with the President's motorcade. Office windows, fire windows were jammed; favored persons stood among the mute lines models in shop windows; the tops of buildings, low ones and dizzy high ones, were fringed with craning necks.

"It's like this all the way to Fairburn—my brother-in-law told me," announced one informed spectator.

From Anniston to See F. D. R.

That woman over there holding the kid told me that she drove all the way from Anniston, Ala., this morning to show the kid the President," confided another.

Atlanta's welcome to the President easily outdid any of the Broadway spectacles that made Jimmy Walker famous in his heyday. Atlantans demonstrated that their delirium can achieve a higher pitch when they settle down to the business of welcoming dunces they are glad to see.

Packed on the sidewalks were ghosts of the city from all points of Georgia. Rural notes could be detected in many of the comments from the crowd.

Police were busy early in the morning adjusting affairs along Peachtree and Whitehall for the presidential procession. A bright sun sparkled overhead and a brisk wind swept down from the north. At 9 o'clock, the hollowness note could be detected along the streets of "gen-u-wine," official vendors of "gen-u-wine," official welcome canes and banners. Get 'em while they last!"

Land Office Business.

The thin ranks of soldiers drifting back and forth were impressed by the authenticity of the banners and banners thrust at them. Coat lapels were decorated with red, white and blue. Many were rummaged in pocketbooks to supply offspring with canes that were certain to be a menace to their short legs for another 15 years.

From far-up Peachtree, the wall of a siren. Headed by motorcycle police, a motorcade from some county, the mounted ranks were to sweep through the north red light under official cover. In while street cars stopped dead in their tracks, automobiles swerved aside and curious pedestrians would rush to the curb to watch the visitors race through the downtown streets toward the parking spot that had been allotted them. A dozen or more of these motorcades sped through Peachtree and Whitehall during the early morning. More cars in each group, with windshields and the side windows voicing the welcome of the counties they represented.

Theaters Cash In.

Movie theaters were open at 9 o'clock, some before, to catch the promise of cash among the wanderers.

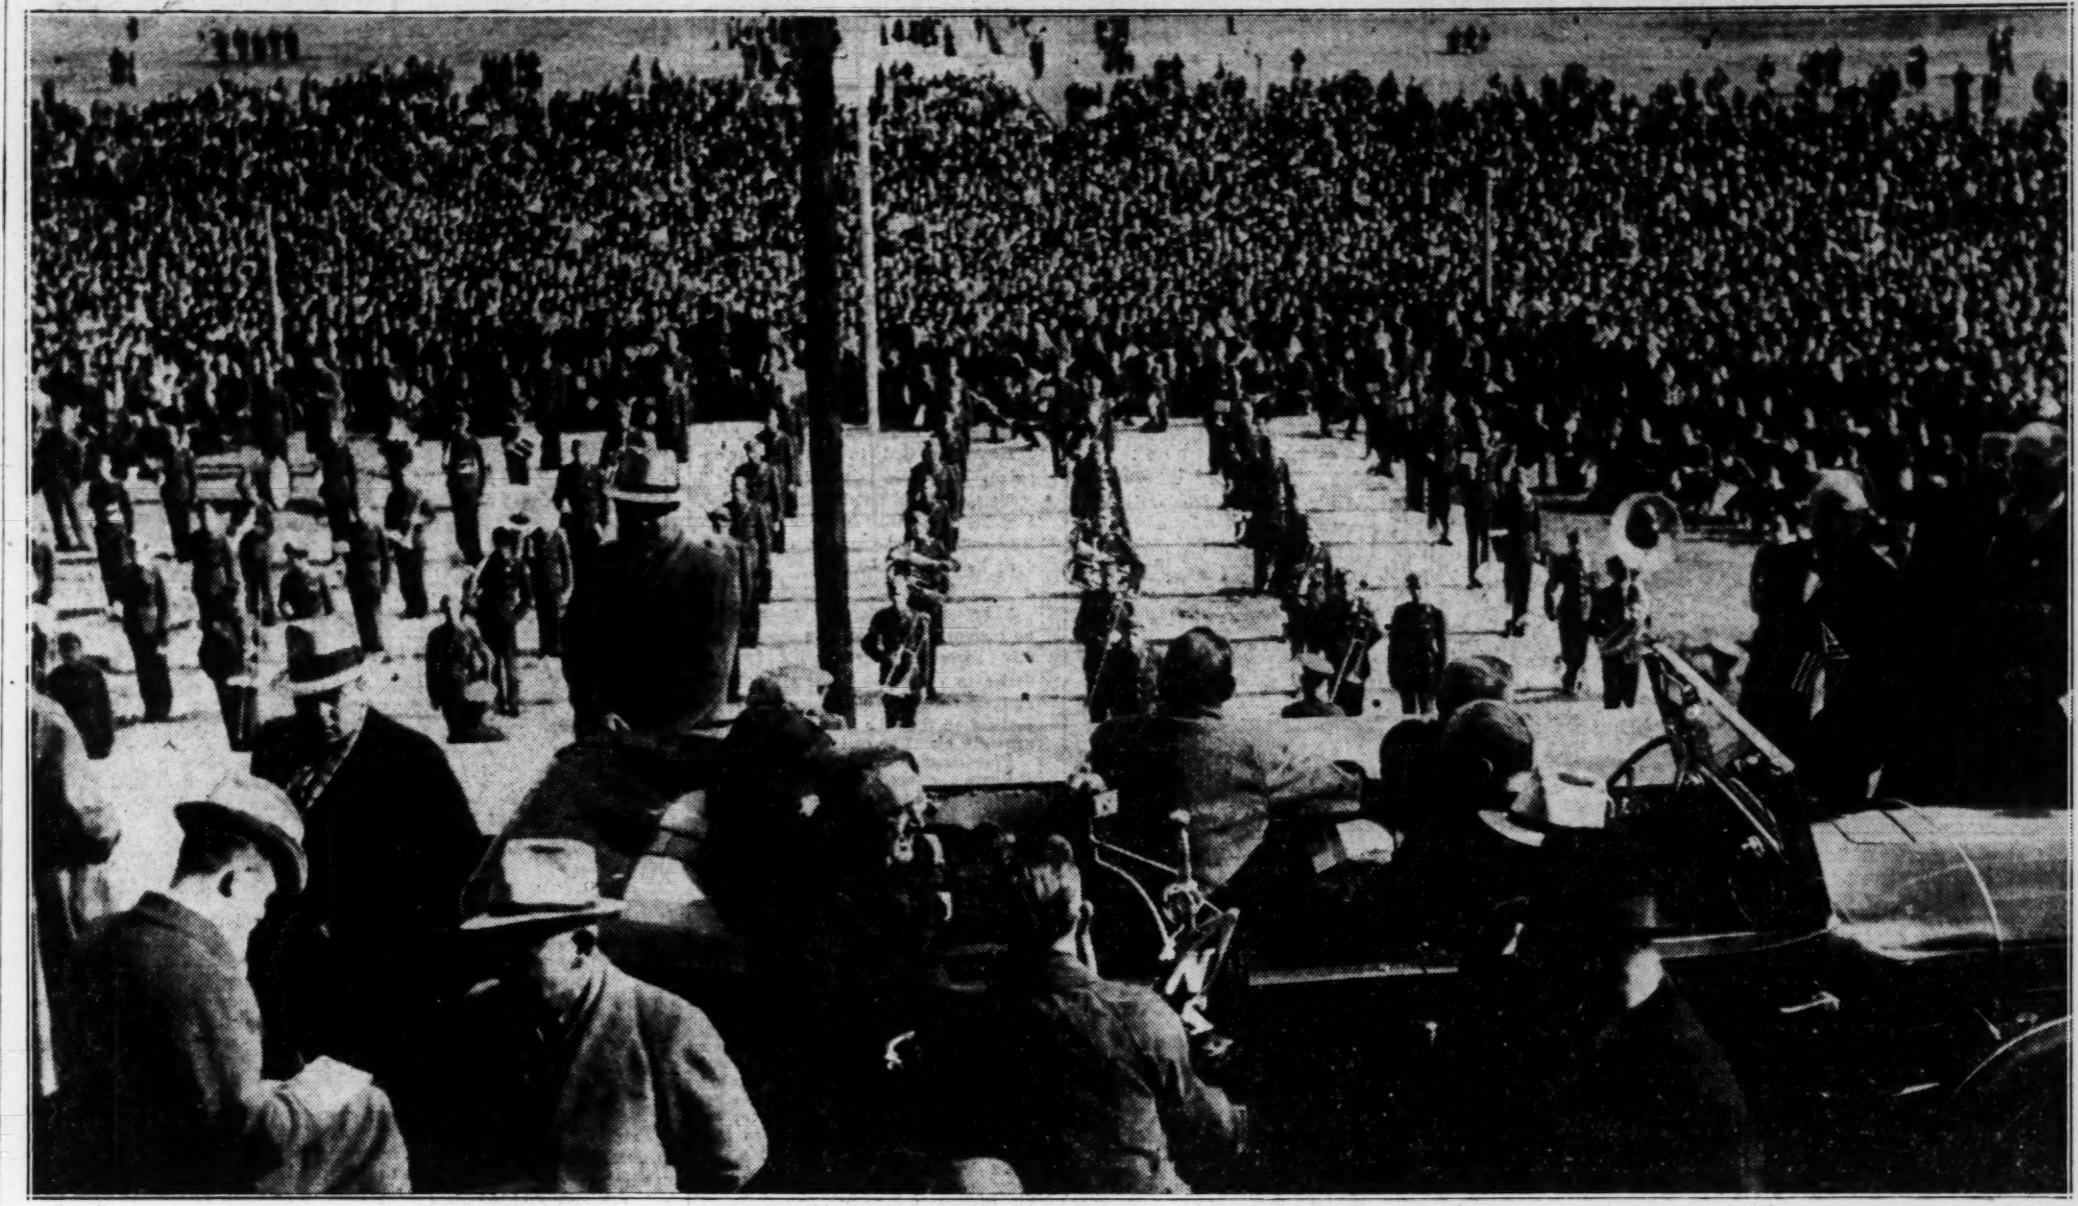

Most earnest of the thousands that flocked down all the side streets toward Peachtree and Whitehall, the negroes. Atlanta colored population was on hand early for this chance to see the President. Many of them were standing along the curbs, waiting patiently, at 9 o'clock, and there they remained steadfast until the President had passed.

Between 10 and 11 o'clock, up all the steps that led toward Peachtree and Whitehall the trudging crowds increased in volume.

At 9 o'clock, Peachtree and Whitehall held only a normal crowd; at 10 o'clock, the streets had the appearance of an average Saturday afternoon; at 11 o'clock, it was possible to move along the sidewalks in narrow lane and at 11:30 o'clock, movement was negligible.

Street cars that had moved through Peachtree and Whitehall freely during the morning were shunted off at 11 o'clock, and at Five Points hundreds wooden tower had been built. It was for the dozens of movie men here to cover the event and record it for the movie reels which will go to every movie house in the nation.

Now and then there were blasts from the clusters of loudspeakers about the stadium, as electricians tested the apparatus which was to carry the speech to all parts of the stadium and the city.

They were not passing up the chance to have their children see the man who looms larger in the economic and political history of our nation than any other man before him in the same office.

Soldiers Everywhere.

Soldiers of the 22d infantry guard the south entrance. They were everywhere. A detail was posted beneath the stadium. And above there were details at the gates and in various sections of the stadium.

From the top of the naval armory at the north end of the stadium flew the myriad flags used to indicate the presence of the President, the chief commander of the army and navy.

At 10 o'clock gray clouds took over

'SOLID FOR ROOSEVELT,' 3 GOVERNORS REPORT

Executives of Florida, Alabama, South Carolina Enthusiastic After Address

Though the chief executive of his second state was absent, three Dixie Governors enthusiastically informed President Roosevelt following his speech here yesterday that it sounded the keynote of the 1936 campaign and assured him his re-election is certain.

The executives, Governor Bibb Graves of Alabama; Governor Dave Shultz of Florida, and Governor Olin Johnston of South Carolina, warmly grasped the President's hand and told him their states are "solid for Roosevelt."

"We can go to the entire country on that speech and take it by storm," Governor Graves, usually a quiet man, fairly shouted as he reached the President's car a minute or two after the speech concluded.

"I have never heard anything like it," Governor Shultz went on. "If there were any doubts, this great crowd they are converted now."

Governor Shultz and Johnston nodded assent.

"Florida went republican one time but it certainly came back into the democratic fold at the first opportunity," Governor Shultz said. "Our state will be solid in the democratic column. Everyone within our boundaries realizes that if we were not you, Mr. President, rain would be over our land. We are very grateful and we are here in large numbers today to show our gratitude."

The President remarked to the governors that he noted the large groups of Floridians along the route of the parade and the stadium.

Governor Johnston likewise said his state was more than safe for Roosevelt.

"There never has been any doubt about South Carolina," that state's chief executive said. "It is almost always as much to 50 to 1 democrat as to 50 to 1 democrat. We are going to poll more democratic votes next year than ever before. I'm just going to say the opposition will be lucky if it polls 1,000 votes in the entire state."

The President made no effort to hide his pleasure. He was still smiling and waving the hands of his gubernatorial well-wishers as his car pulled away from the stadium.

Savannah Leader Tricky.

The Savannah band marched around the running track with the leader doing some neat stunts with baton. Some college band subsidized him.

There was a great blaze of bands everywhere. The Dalton musicians entertained with "How Dry I Am."

There were some vacant spots in the stands at 12 o'clock. Radio reports the place was jammed early but the confusion and the lines the downtown streets were expected to fill the stands and the field when the downtown parade was over.

Fearing the loudspeakers at the field would not be strong enough to reach the ends of the stadium, the crowd was neglecting them and jamming into the field.

At 12:15 another just noon there were some 5,000 people standing on the field directly in front of and beneath the speaker's stand at the south end of the stadium.

At 12:20 there were some 30,000 people in the stands and on the field.

The radio brought in the music of "America" from Piedmont park, where the school children were greeting the President.

Pledge of Allegiance.

The great strength at the field stood with bared heads. Then came the words of the pledge of the flag and after the words could be heard "Glory to Old Georgia." But they came right back with the "Ramblin' Wreck."

Bands from the Savannah police and fire department arrived along with the Atlanta band.

From Macon came the Lanier High school band, a beauty. It marched down North Avenue playing spiritedly before coming into the field.

TUMULTUOUS OVATION ACCORDED PRESIDENT

Thundering ovation when he said that the nation does not desire a return to either.

Socks Critics.

He took punch after punch at his critics without naming anyone, answering the attacks of Governor Talmadge with a honest report on the administration and the program of continued improvement, answering the attacks of big business with the assertion that the bankers, in the spring of 1933 when every bank in the country was closed, told him unequivocally that they felt the nation could stand a deficit of from $5 to $10 billion without impairing credit and yet they are complaining bitterly because of the present deficit of less than $30 billion, a great portion of which is protected by recoverable assets.

In his panoply of New Deal successes, the President asserted that the administration has achieved its November goal of getting practically all of the 3,500,000 employables on relief rolls last spring on work relief and drew from the crowd one of his loudest cheers when he asserted that he believed that those out of work desire work rather than a dole.

He concluded with words to the rising commodity prices and turned a devastating attack on "individuals and groups" who are calling the program foolhardy.

George Present: President.

Senator Walter F. George, the state's senior senator, who had been seconded by the President as the present chief executive "and the next President of the United States," declared that the home-coming celebration was a great success, asserting that Georgia had shown itself to be even stronger for the President today than it was when he was elected in 1932.

"Every citizen of life in Georgia was present today," Senator George said. "I have never had any doubt but that the President was becoming increasingly popular in our state. But there were doubters. The President showed them today and they showed the President. From now on you will hear no talk of Georgia turning against Roosevelt. It never will."

Senator Russell, who with Senator George shared the honors on the platform at the stadium likewise reported his enthusiasm for the President at a higher pitch than ever before.

Roosevelt Solid Choice.

"We all have been the President that he had nothing to fear in Georgia had our statements backed up by half a million people today," Senator Russell said. "From now on Roosevelt will be the solid choice of all red-blooded Georgians. Georgia is proud of President Roosevelt and we know that the President is proud of Georgia."

General Chairman Erle Cocke, of the home-coming celebration committee, said that the day's even' just proved what he has always contended, that "Georgia is forever a Roosevelt state."

The great crowd in Grant field which filled all but a few scattered seats in the big bowl and which included some 30,000 massed on the field, was a typical Georgia political audience.

The President was hailed by cheers at almost every sencence and often times the lustily-voiced supporters did not wait for him to complete the sentence. They stopped him amid phrases. The speech designed to require slightly more than 20 minutes, because of the length of the delay, was lengthened to 45 minutes. After it had been concluded, the President revealed that because of the delay he sought to cut it some as he went, but found it impossible. He had a message for the nation, through Georgia, and he gave it to them. And the crowd, chilled through by the cold, liked it all the more and called for more when he had concluded.

Supporters Urge Fireworks.

As the President went through the text of his address he was stopped numerous times by loud-speaking supporters who urged him to turn a more withering fire on his critics.

As he spoke of the success of his farm program, particularly as it affects the cotton grower, there was a shout from the crowd "where's George?" but the President only smiled and continued.

He varied from his text only slightly and then did not change the meaning of any point.

The wide scope of the President's review of the New Deal program, plus his vigorous if not scathing attack on administration, left no room for doubt as to the high note character of the Georgia home-coming celebration speech. It is regarded as marking the lines along which the 1936 presidential campaign will be fought out, and however others may feel, Mr. Roosevelt himself appears confident of the outcome.

Citrus Improvement.

Poising to the striking improvement in economic conditions during the past two years, the president placed himself in a continuation of the "forceful effort" on the part of the government toward business recovery. Contrasted with a national insolvency which he said existed in the dark days of 1933, the nation today, by virtue of increased property values of all kind, is "one more in the black," he declared, adding:

"We are solvent. In this fact most of us find a deep satisfaction."

One especially significant utterance came near the end of the President's speech:

"As things stand today," he said, "and in the light of a definite and continuing economic improvement, we have passed the peak of appropriations; revenues without the imposition of new taxes are increasing, and we can look forward with assurance to a decreasing deficit. The credit of the government is today higher than that of any other great nation in the world, in spite of attacks on that credit made by some individuals and organizations which seek to dictate to the administration and to the congress how to run the national treasury and how to let the needy starve."

Indicates Spending Reduction.

All of this was taken as further evidence of the determination of the administration to curtail emergency expenditures and bring the budget into gradual balance. It was Mr. Roosevelt's answer to those of his critics who have complained of the huge expenditures going for unemployment relief, industrial rehabilitation and public works.

Almost in the same breath and in the same connection he gave a report on the state of the nation's finances, declaring that the national indebtedness today is only $2,300,000,000 more than it was on the day he took office, March 4, 1933, measured in the recoverable assets and working treasury balances which he said the government will bet back over a period of years, "and which will be used for the reduction of debts."

Indicates Debt Figures.

"As a matter of actual fact," the chief executive asserted, "of course the national debt under the last administration rose from a little over 17 billions to 21 billions. The day I came into office I found that the national treasury contained only $158,000,000, or, at the rate of previously

Downtown Crowds Roar Their Welcome to F. D. R.

ATTACK ON ROOSEVELT RENEWED BY FLETCHER

G. O. P. Chairman Says F. D. R.'s Build-Up for 'Fake' Balance.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Henry P. Fletcher, republican national chairman, described tonight President Roosevelt's Atlanta speech as "an obvious build-up for a future fake balancing of the budget by New Deal sleight-of-hand."

Mr. Roosevelt had declared that the depth of the deficit and peak of appropriations had been reached.

Declaring that in the 1932 campaign, Mr. Roosevelt promised rigid economy but did not fulfill the pledge, Fletcher said that "as a candidate Mr. Roosevelt is for economy, as a president he is a spender."

Early Halt Charged.

"The sudden interest in economy now shown by Candidate Roosevelt," said Fletcher, "springs not from a desire to cease his political spending and squandering but from his tardy realization that the long-suffering citizens are about to call a halt."

Fletcher challenged a portion of Mr. Roosevelt's speech in which the latter referred to bankers agreeing with him in 1933 that government funds must be spent to stave off collapse.

"Will the President take the country into his confidence and name the bankers who said in 1933 that the country could stand a debt of between $85,000,000,000 and $70,000,000,000?" Fletcher asked.

Taking with still another portion of the President's fiscal speech, the republican chairman said:

Misleading Statement.

"The statement of the President that the so-called recoverable assets will be used for the purpose of reducing the public debt is misleading.

These assets so far as they are recoverable at all are not available for the reduction of the public debt so long as the government operates at a deficit."

Referring to the President's remarks on the credit of the government, Fletcher said he probably referred to the "low rate of interest at which the government is operating."

"This rate of interest," Fletcher continued, "is the result of the administration's manipulation of the market for government bonds and its forcing of obligations upon our commercial banks."

But the credit of the United States is an entirely different thing from the credit of the Roosevelt administration.

Mr. Roosevelt continually confuses the United States of America and the American government with his own temporary and experimental administration."

And with a smile he let it be known his wasn't surprised.

Lauded at Statement.

When he was told of the governor's statement about spending the day driving around Atlanta, he responded again when Senator Richard B. Russell, who was sitting with him, asked that he, too, liked to hunt.

The state capitol was the only important public building not extensively decorated for the day. Immediately in front of the Washington street entrance there were two small flags stuck into the ground. It could not be learned whether they were there officially or had been planted by someone who took it upon himself to see the capitol had some decoration.

The state military building was flying the Stars and Stripes as well as the Confederate flag.

The courthouse and city hall were both gaily decorated and all employees had the day off to attend the celebration. Work at the capitol went on as usual.

Early yesterday morning, Chief of Police J. Sturdivant said to a mob reaching police headquarters a mob was storming the capitol.

Dummy Hanging in Tree.

The chief executive then recalled similar demands for government initiative by harassed home owners of the nation, industrial concerns, banks, insurance companies, stock exchange regulation, elimination of sweat shops and child labor, and legislation adopted by the recent congress.

These were some of the salient points in his rather comprehensive review of New Deal achievements and it was impossible to interpret the speech otherwise than as sounding the keynote of the approaching campaign.

While Mr. Roosevelt at no point mentioned the name of former President Hoover, his several references to the Hoover administration and the "four years of disaster and gloom" preceding his own entry into the White House are regarded as the possibility of Mr. Hoover again becoming the candidate of his party for the presidency.

Chief Sturdivant said the dummy was at police headquarters, awaiting disposal.

"Our men gave chase after they found the governor hanging in effigy but could not catch the crowd which had left the capitol," the chief reported.

The governor had been sent tickets to the Grant field ceremonies and space was reserved for him and his family along with other distinguished guests.

General Chairman Erle Cocke said that as far as he knew nothing had been received by the committee from the governor.

Debt Limit Increases.

If the bankers thought the country could stand a debt of $55,000,000,000 to $70,000,000,000 in 1933, with values as they were then, I wonder what they would say the country could stand today, in the light of the four years of disaster and gloom?"

"Four years ago he was compelled to go into the market and the possibility of Mr. Roosevelt's being elected the candidate of his party for the presidency,"

Chief Sturdivant said the dummy was at police headquarters, awaiting disposal.

CLIPPER IS GROOMED FOR RETURN FLIGHT

Journey Back to U. S. Will Complete Transoceanic Air Mail Service.

MANILA, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Uncle Sam's trans-Pacific air mail flyers groomed their China Clipper today for an early return flight while Manila still celebrated their history-making arrival.

Mechanics began conditioning the 25-ton sky liner for the 8,000-mile trip back to Alameda, Cal., a few hours after she sailed into Manila to complete the first air mail crossing of the western ocean.

The homeward journey is to start December 2.

The Clipper alighted on Manila bay at 3:31 p. m. today (1:31 a. m., Atlanta time)—just four minutes behind the schedule tentatively made out by Pan-American Airways five years ago when the trans-Pacific project was conceived.

Despite the record distance and hazards involved, Captain E. C. Musick brought the big plane to Manila exactly on schedule—60 hours out of Alameda—but the sudden appearance of small craft on the landing ground delayed him to delay the historic landing by four minutes.

It is flying time for the 1,700 miles from Guam, final stretch of the trans-oceanic journey, will be 11 hours, 25 minutes.

While the 1,400 pounds of mail was being taken to the Manila post office, Captain Musick was escorted to Manila's post office.

The Clipper's speed time from Alameda, with overnight stops at Honolulu, Midway and Wake islands and a Thanksgiving layover at Guam, was six days. This is 18 days faster than the best steamer time.

PORUGAL AUTHORIZES FINAL CONTRACT LINK.

LISBON, Nov. 29.—(UP)—The minister of colonies today authorized the government of Macao, Portuguese colony near Hong Kong and Canton, China, to sign a contract with Pan-American Airways for the transport of air mail.

The contract, it is believed, will form the final link of air service between the United States and China. The line now extends as far as Manila.

LIVESTOCK EXPOSITION WILL OPEN IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(AP)—An overture of squeals, grunts and bellows sounded today that the east was on hand for the thirty-sixth international Livestock Exposition.

The big farm show—a superstate fair, opens tomorrow, with 12,000 animals entered. Thirty breeds of swine, beef cattle, horses, and sheep are judged each year.

That cancer is not common among primitive people is now explained mainly on the ground that they do not live long enough to die of this disease.

Italian Planes Bomb Daggah Bur; Many Women, Children Are Killed

Selassie En Route to Dessa To Assume Personal Command of Ethiopia's Defense; Ras Guetatchou Appointed Governor of Kifa and Gofa Provinces.

ADDIS ABABA, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The Ethiopian government said today many men and children were killed when Italian airplanes bombed Daggah Bur, fortress on the southern front.

(The bombing of Daggah Bur was officially announced in Rome.)

"Nine Italian planes dropped 1,500 bombs," said the communiqué, "most incendiary, on Daggah Bur fortress, killing many women and children."

"A new church and many houses were destroyed by fire."

"Four sick natives within the church were among the victims. There were no victims among the soldiers, who are trained to scatter in the hills even morning."

Emperor Haile Selassie, traveling by caravan, was expected to reach Dessa tonight. There he will assume personal command of Ethiopia's defense.

Elaborate precautions were taken to protect the emperor in the event of an Italian air raid. He hours out of Alameda—but the sudden appearance of small craft on the Nile caused him to delay the historic landing by four minutes.

Ethiopians said that did not know long the ruler would remain at Dessa, which is headquarters between the northern and southern fronts. They might return to Addis Ababa for the duration of the war and others that he might return, especially if reports of Ethiopian victories in the north are true.

Selassie's party, made up of hundreds of soldiers and numerous dignitaries traveling in 500 motor cars and trucks, bivouacked last night at Dohar, Birr, after the German pilot, Weber, had scouted the area.

'BLACK EAGLE' TELLS OF ETHIOPIAN 'HORROR'

Col. Julian, in Paris, Resents Intrusions at "Bawth."

PARIS, Saturday, Nov. 30.—(UP) Brandishing a 68-page, long-hand manuscript entitled, "Why I Resigned From the Ethiopian Army," which he is ready to sell to the highest bidder, Colonel Hubert Fauntleroy Julian, "Black Eagle of Harlem," today rested in the Hotel Ambassador after an ordeal which he admits was "something terrific."

The Harlem negro aviator who has just returned from Addis Ababa, had tried unsuccessfully to auction the manuscript to newspaper correspondents in the Ethiopian capital.

Resplendent in spats, striped trousers, dark coat, wing collar and a stiff shirt with gold studs, the "Black Eagle" said that "I chose my duty to the world rather than my duty to Ethiopia." He claimed he could make startling revelations in connection with his Ethiopian adventure.

Julian hinted there were dark and devious reasons for the blow he dealt the Ethiopian cause by resigning.

"A man of my experience, my oratorical ability, my personality—such a man does not make decisions on the spur of the moment," said the man who once served up Emperor Haile Selassie's private supper and was put to training infantrymen when war started.

"I have seen massacres," he continued gravely. "I have seen horrors."

middle western concern—refused during the day to register under the act, and asked four different courts to stop the securities commission from enforcing it.

This brought to 10 the number of states taking legal action challenging the act's constitutionality. The total number of such suits rose to 38 but all but 10 were duplicate proceedings brought by subsidiaries and affiliates.

In the federal court action, Judge John P. Nields, at Wilmington, Del., declined to pass on the act's constitutionality because the government was not a party to the case. Trustees for the Central West Public Service Company had asked the court to decide on the situation.

Contentions Upheld.

Commission officials said Judge Nields upheld the position they took in the Baltimore federal court a short time ago. Then the government argued as a friend of the court and not as a party to the proceeding. The court refused its plea and declared the act invalid.

Some commission officials contended that there now existed a good chance that higher court would overrule the Baltimore court in this procedural basis. In effect, the ruling was that a constitutional test is improper if the government is not a party to the proceeding. The utilities have used the Baltimore decision as a major reason for not registering.

The Cities Service units were bought in three jurisdictions—Toledo, Ohio; New York, and Wilmington, apparently to cover places where the company or its subsidiaries were incorporated. Similarly, the United Corporation, which already had filed a suit in New York, filed one also today in Wilmington. United Light & Power filed in Wilmington.

2d Company Registers.

The other two units, Indiana Southwestern Gas & Utilities Company—registered with the commission today. The Montana-Dakota Utilities Company of Minneapolis filed Monday. Two other companies, the New England Power Association and the Utilities Power & Light Company of Chicago have announced they would register.

These registrations, however, were not regarded as breaks in the utilities front. With the exception of the Associated Gas & Electric System, Niagara-Hudson Corporation and Columbia Gas & Electric Company, virtually every major system was believed to be on the firing line against the commission.

The commission, meanwhile, continued its inactivity in the courts, resting for the time being on its suit against Electric Bond & Share Company. It has asked the courts to force the company to register. Other government actions are expected, however.

Examiner Speaks.

A number of companies today asked the commission for exemption from the act, bringing the total of these filings to 39. The act exempts companies predominately intrastate in character, or whose operations are only slightly of a utility character. The application for exemption do not necessarily mean full compliance with the act, however, since the companies could still refuse to register if the commission denied exemption.

To simplify this procedure, and to avoid what were termed burdensome requirements, the commission issued rules making exemptions automatic for those companies. Under these orders, if a company believes, in good faith, it is exempted by the act, it need not even apply for exemption.

Commission officials noted an apparently peculiar situation in the American Waterworks and Electric group, where it and its subsidiaries, West Penn Electric Company, have refused to register and have brought injunction suits. At the same time, the West Penn Power Company, the Monongahela, the West Penn Public Service Company and the Potomac Edison Company have announced they would apply for exemption. Officials said they could not understand why the top company would refuse to register while its subsidiaries sought exemption.

"We have done our part in pioneering, and in my opinion the present record will stand for several years," Lagore said. "The scientific results of the expedition are still being tabulated. It is evident, even at this stage, that they will prove invaluable."

Japanese Government Denies Part In North China Autonomy Move

LONDON, Nov. 29.—(AP) Japan officially has disavowed Great Britain's responsibility for the north China autonomy movement, it was learned tonight.

The vice minister in charge of the Japanese embassy office in Tokyo told F. H. Wiggin, the British chargé d'affaires, that Japan considers the movement to be entirely Chinese and wholly spontaneous, authoritative sources said.

Japan is watching the Chinese developments as an interested spectator, the minister stated.

Wiggin was said to have sought information of conflicting reports on the situation.

It was understood the charge d'affaires, who is handling British diplomatic affairs in the absence of Ambassador Sir Robert Clive in China, had called the nine-power conference to Japan's attention pending further instructions.

In London the Japanese viewpoint was accepted as a polite diplomatic dodge, and it left the future course of British action unclarified.

Despite the response, informed sources said the Japanese are resorting to almost the exact tactics they used in presenting Manchukuo to the world as an independent state, over which they professed to have no jurisdiction.

There was no official indication that London or any other major power would overrule the Chinese protest note.

Informed sources said the United States was being kept advised of the British viewpoint on the north China situation.

JAP ARMY INDICTED FOR CHINESE SITUATION

NANKING, Nov. 29.—(AP) China's central government openly indicted the Japanese army today for "conning" to create an autonomous state in north China.

A sharply-worded protest, following an earlier communication to the Japanese embassy which assailed seizure of the railway junction point of Fengtai, east of Peiping, by Japanese troops, was filed with Japan by the foreign office.

It declared "disgruntled elements, ment used for scraping stickers and posters from windows.

Dentists, too, are not immune from accidents. In Philadelphia, a dentist suffered a badly blackened eye when a tooth he extracted slipped from the forceps and struck him in the eye.

"These are some unusual accidents," Bashore said. "I cite them to bring out the great need of care at all times and in all circumstances so that by co-operation we may further reduce the number of industrial accidents in Pennsylvania."

The job required about 1,500 hours of work, and the difficulty wasn't in keeping the boys at it, but in preventing them from working too long.

Professor Petersen, a licensed pilot himself, said he had to lock up the workshop at night to keep the boys out.

The project was completed without cost to the college.

The six students are Dan Ono, Richard Brekke, Earl Bodenshatz, John White, Sumner Dodge and Peter Enos.

MONTANA YULE TREES READY FOR SHIPMENT

MISSOULA, Mont., Nov. 29.—(UP) Montana Christmas trees will light the way in thousands of American homes when St. Nick pays his annual visit this year.

Traditional forests of the region are rapidly becoming one of the most important sources for trees for decorative purposes in the midwest and east. Increasing numbers are being cut each year.

This year 11,500 small firs have been sold from the Bitterroot national forest for use as Christmas trees. The small, compacted trees will be cut, bundled and shipped in carload lots in early December.

Not only do the shipments provide seasonal employment for hundreds of men, the forest service says, but the Christmas tree harvest also is beneficial to the forests.

The trees are marked by forest officers and as a result the harvest becomes a scientifically conducted thinning operation.

Dry ice is being used in India to ship fish into the interior during the bad weather of the monsoon season.

SIX STUDENTS BUILD SUCCESSFUL BIPLANE

California College Boys' Ship Wins Approval of U. S. Inspectors.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 29.—Six young San Jose State College students, all future airmen, get the thrill that goes with pride of craftsmanship whenever a trim little biplane takes off from the airport here—for they made it.

The successive protests, informed sources stated, plainly indicated the Nanking government was stiffening in its opposition to the campaign of new manifestations of Chinese popular feeling against autonomy.

"Preposterous," Japs Assert.

(A Japanese army spokesman at Tientsin, where four more Japanese airplanes arrived today, asserted Chinese charges of Japanese connivance with the autonomy movement were "preposterous" and "apparently designed to secure the aid of the United States."

(At the same time, the Japanese government officially advised the British government in London that it would not accept responsibility for developments in north China.

(Japanese residents in Shanghai decided to decorate their homes with cherry blossom emblems to prevent repetition of a recent incident in which police raided a Japanese residence in the belief the occupants were Chinese.

Both of the Chinese notes were handed to Yorikichi Suma, the Japanese embassy consul at Nanking, for transmission to Tokyo.

The first protest asked complete evacuation on Fengtai. Japanese military observers still are there, although the main force of troops which took over the junction Wednesday have withdrawn.

Not Popular Sentiment.

The other note insisted the autonomy movement does not represent popular sentiment but emphasized China's desire to settle northern problems through diplomatic channels.

(Japan's diplomats said difficulties were piling up for Yin Ju-keng, who has set up an autonomous government in east Hopei province. Chinese sources said a majority of the 22 county magistrates in Yin's domain had refused to take orders from him and that only Japanese support had prevented collapse of his government.

(Negotiations meanwhile, continued between Sung Cheh-yuan, commander of the Leping-Tientsin garrison, and Japanese representatives.)

INSTALLMENT XXXIV.

Jane Lee had not moved from her position among the pillows. When Mother went over to her bed she realized that she had fainted again. The shock had been too great for her. The old maid went out to find Eurasia and tell her to get the doctor. Jane Lee must have medical attention.

When she returned Sugar was on her knees by the old nurse's chair holding her face.

"Take Mrs. Simms to the bedroom across the hall." Mother took command of the situation. "We'll have the doctor take a look at her too. You must rest here, at least for the night. Mrs. Simms. You've been under a terrible strain."

The nurse tried to get up, but fell back into her chair. It took Sugar and Mother both to get her into the bed. Miss Friddle hurried back to Jane Lee and left the nurse in Sugar's care.

It was strange. Sugar thought as her senses began coming back to her, that she could not hate the woman. She had stolen her from home and taken her to an orphanage to grow up unknown and unwanted. But in Sugar's heart there was nothing but tenderness.

Tenderly she bathed the old woman's face and stroked her thin wrists. After a long time her color began coming back, and she opened her eyes.

"You're good," she said wearily. "Why don't you hate me?"

Sugar shook her head pitifully.

"You—didn't mean to do wrong. You must never think I hate you. If it hadn't been me it would have been Zanie Lou who went to the orphanage. It doesn't matter—now."

The woman closed her eyes again.

"You are Zanie Lou. Your name is Zanie Lou Langworthy."

Sugar's head whirled dizzily as she realized that was the truth. Why Zanie Lou wasn't Zanie Lou at all. She, Sugar Friddle, was Zanie Lou. She said breathlessly:

"What was the other baby's name, Mrs. Simms? Do you know?"

"Patsy Ann. Patsy Ann Peters. Her mother named her the night before she was born. She wanted a little girl."

AUNT HET

BY ROBERT QUILLER.

"I wish Pa had cut off his mustache gradual, like he grew it, so I could get used to the change by degrees."

(Copyright, 1935, for The Constitution.)

Nothing had been heard from Zanie Lou and Johnny. Scoop called at Dick Le Masters' office and told him of his theory of the mystery. There was little doubt that Johnny and Zanie Lou had left together. Mr. Le Masters put the best private detectives he could find on their trail, and left the rest to them.

Jane Lee was too ill to worry as to what had happened to her daughter.

For days she lay in a stupor, and the doctor came several times a day. It was the most serious kind of nervous breakdown, he said gravely, and ordered that she be removed to a sanitarium as soon as she was able to travel.

Sugar wanted to be her sister's nurse. But Dr. Griffin had brought in both day and night nurse and forbidden the family to go farther than the door of her room.

This gave Sugar nothing to do but take care of Skeeter. And the first thing she did, with the consent of her brother-in-law, was to send Dillie back to her husband and set herself up as ruler of the nursery.

She was shocked that first evening when she left Mrs. Simms and went in search of the baby to find him playing dizzily on the floor of the nursery alone. He had lost all the weight he had gained when she was with him, and he didn't look as if a ray of sunshine had struck him since she went away.

When Skeeter had looked up and seen Sugar in the doorway he began to sob pitifully, and she gathered him in her arms and promised again never to leave him. That night, instead of taking the beautiful room Eurasia had said was to be her very own, she moved back to her little bed in the nursery. And with horses could not have pulled her away.

At first it was difficult for the baby to learn to say "Aunt Patsy Ann."

"It's a lovely name," Sugar said. But he soon forgot that she had been repeating it to herself. "Patsy Ann. If my sister will let me, I want to be called Patsy Ann. We can't ask Zanie to give the name back after all these years."

She had called Jane Lee sister.

An hour before she had called her mother.

In all the world, Sugar remembered that Skeeter was her nephew who would have to pick him up in his sleep and hold him close to satisfy the sweet hunger in her heart.

While Jane Lee lay like a dead woman in her bed, her husband puzzled over the best thing to do about revealing the story of Sugar Friddle to a puzzled Lorien. Then, he decided sensibly, there was only one course.

It was Scoop who prepared the story in his most dramatic style, and took it to the editor of the Lorien Blade.

There, taking up a column in bold black type on the front page, it was blazoned to gasping Lorien.

Better the truth than a garbled small town version of the mystery, Dick had decided, and Cart had agreed with him.

After all, both Mr. and Mrs. Langworthy were dead and the truth could not hurt anyone else.

It was three weeks after Sugar learned that she was Zanie Lou Langworthy that Scoop called and asked to see her.

She was sorry she had neglected him for so long. So she told him to come right to the house, and waited in the library.

Sugar was shocked when she saw her old protector. He looked as though he had lost pounds.

Sue went up to him and gave him a quick kiss on the cheek.

"Oh, Scoop," she said happily, "it's good to see you again!"

"Sayon!" His eyes lingered hungrily on her little face.

She was older, he decided. More like a woman, after all she had been through.

There was a sweet gravity in her face that made her even more beautiful than when he first loved her.

"How is your sister?" he asked, to make conversation.

"The doctor says she's better. But she can't sit up yet. It will be several months before she is really well, I'm afraid."

There was a strained silence between them. Sugar laughed nervously.

"We seem to be tongue-tied. By the way, Mr. O'Reilly, how is your book coming along?"

"That's the one thing I came to tell you. I finished 'When a Man Loves' today."

"Oh, I'm glad," Sugar smiled. "I know it will be wonderful."

"I should surprise you. But do you mind if I dedicate it to you?"

Sugar's eyes grew round with amazement.

"Scoop! I'd be thrilled to death! You can't be serious!"

"Honor bright, Lollypop."

"What would you say?" she hugged herself excitedly.

The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Farbey, Ph.D.

I have found many people who believe that mice are young rats. These two little mammals are separate species, and have never been known to cross or show any close relationship. They are members of the large group called "rodents," which include rabbits, squirrels and other mammals which gnaw. Their genus name is Mus. Rats are always rats, and mice are always mice.

Georgia Conceded Slight Edge Over Georgia Tech Today

Very cold out on the limb this morning, amigos. Very, very chilly. Also slightly lonesome. But here your old partner is, shivering out there on the limb with Georgia as the winner in today's setto with those Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets.

Football arguments have been worth a dime a dozen this year.

But the fact remains Georgia has a slight edge in blocking, in the number of running backs, in speed, in kicking and in passing.

That should be enough to win any football game.

I think Tech's ends are better and that Dutch Konemann is the best back who will appear.

But that still doesn't offset the Georgia edge.

All of this should figure a Georgia victory.

Yet most of the pre-game predictions and deductions this season have been twisted into something resembling mental pretzels the next day.

There is not enough difference between the two teams to make either one a decided favorite. Georgia has a slight edge before the game is played. But that is based on the supposition Georgia will play to the limit of the team's possibilities.

If so, Georgia will win.

But the capabilities of the two teams are such that one of them has only to be slightly amiss in its execution of offense and defense for the other to win.

It should be Georgia. It may not be.

Games turn on such small and seemingly inconsequential events when two teams are as nearly evenly matched as these that no prediction is any better than a guess.

Tech is the long shot. Sometimes they come through.

TWO CAPABLE, SPLENDID GENTLEMEN.

The teams are coached by two capable, splendid gentlemen. Mr. William A. Alexander, of Georgia Tech, is the dean of Southern coaches now that Dan McGugin has retired from active coaching. It so happens that Harry Mehre, of Georgia, is the junior dean, so to speak. The game today completes his eighth year as head coach at Athens and his eleventh as a member of the staff. Against this Alexander offers 17 seasons.

Both men have turned out excellent football teams.

As concrete examples of this are the concrete athletic plants at the two universities. As concrete evidence also is the esteem and friendship which hundreds of boys have for them after having played for them.

The game today is important to them. The victories for both have run in cycles. Georgia's cycle has gone on, interrupted only by one tie, since the victory of Harry Mehre's 1929 eleven in the rain at Athens. It may be that the lane turns today with a victory for Alexander.

At any rate, here are two coaches whose teams are not in the championship race at all. Yet they are such interesting teams and the rivalry is such that 30,000 people are expected to be present today to see them play.

It is too bad the football public never gets to know the man behind the term "coach." To the public he is but a figure in newspapers, a man in an overcoat who is very restless on the bench as the teams play.

Let me present two very fine gentlemen whom you'd like—the Messrs. Alexander and Mehre.

SUFFERING COACHES.

Frank Thomas, whose Alabama football team lost to Vanderbilt at Nashville on what was a thankless Thanksgiving Day for Alabama, will be here today.

"By that time," he said yesterday, "I will have recovered somewhat. I want to be able to sit around with nothing on my mind but my hat, and watch someone else suffer. Believe me we've done lots of it over our way."

Thomas' team lost in what was something of an upset. And that game hinged on several little turns of the wheel of luck.

Alabama received the kickoff and quick-kicked, catching Vanderbilt flat. The ball rolled to the Vanderbilt 4-yard line.

The strategy had worked as expected. It worked again when Dixon's return kick was poor and short into the wind.

Alabama started an attack. Kilgore made 7 yards on the first play—and fumbled, Vanderbilt recovering.

That nullified everything.

Vanderbilt used a new defense, dropping back the ends and letting the tackles play at the normal end positions. The Commodores gambled at stopping the wide plays by Alabama, and did!

During the half Frank Thomas had his men instructed at throwing the Notre Dame spinner plays back inside the line and through the center. But somehow the boys couldn't get going at it. They had no guards left, for one thing.

At any rate Vanderbilt went on to win a fine victory.

The Alabama team at no time looked like the Alabama team which won several fine victories. It had an off-day. Vanderbilt had an "on" day. In these days and times that can spell victory or defeat.

THOMAS DOES GOOD JOB.

Frank Thomas did a good job of coaching at Alabama. It was apparent all year his team was not nearly as strong as the Rose Bowl championship team which trampled Stanford.

He was tied in his opening game and defeated in the next. Ordinarily this would have wrecked a team of ex-champions. The fact that Thomas was able to get them back together and win all but two conference games bespeaks well of his ability.

A GREAT RIVALRY.

This is a great rivalry between Georgia Tech and Georgia. It should not be endangered by any fistcuffing on the field by students or young graduates of the two schools following the game.

A black eye sustained in a bit of fist-and-skull exercise does not look or feel any the better for having been received in behalf of one's Alma Mater.

The two teams annually play a hard-fought game and shake hands after it is done. There seems to be no need for the two student bodies to engage in any warfare at all. It doesn't help the standing of football for it to inspire public brawls.

British 'Hands Off' Tom Bridges Proud Of Baby Daughter

LONDON, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Sir John Bridges, secretary for home affairs of Great Britain, today refused to interfere with the playing of a scheduled Anglo-German soccer game at Nottingham next Wednesday. He said:

"Wednesday's match has no political significance whatever, and does not imply any view by either government regarding the policy or institutions of the other."

He Plays His Final Game for Georgia Today— Flying Dutchman Ready To Fly for Tech

Al Minot, right halfback of the Georgia Bulldogs, will wear the Red and Black for the last time today. Minot has been one of the most consistent of the Bulldog backs. He is a good runner, a great blocker and a splendid pass receiver.

He is potent on pass defense. The picture on the right shows Marion Konemann, Tech's Flying Dutchman who is only a sophomore. He is, however, one of the finest sophomore backs in the south today. Konemann is really just beginning his career as Minot ends his. A great battle and a record crowd for a Tech-Georgia game is in prospect today. The kickoff is scheduled at 2 o'clock. Constitution staff photos by Kenneth Rogers.

Georgia Has Advantage In Backs, Tech in Line

Comparative Scores Afford Both Sides Strong Argument; 16 Seniors in Finale.

By Jack Troy.

Literally thousands of Georgians, supporters of both Tech and Georgia, crossed the goal lines at Grant field yesterday to hear President Roosevelt deliver a stirring address of great political significance. The old rebel yell echoed in the stadium, time and time again.

Touchdowns would have been six for a nickel or a dime a dozen yesterday.

But today, Ah, today, my friends, is another day. And touchdowns today will be very dear to the hearts of the countrymen pulling for their favorites as Tech and Georgia engage in the annual skirmish.

Advance ticket sales indicate that one of the largest crowds in attendance at the Tech-Georgia game in many years and, perhaps, for all time, is assured. The gate may run as high as 35,000.

And, it may be, the stadium will be packed for two days in a row. There was a record crowd at Grant field yesterday to hear the President.

And, if you will pardon my mentioning it, Clark Gable is a piker compared with the President. Speaking of the ladies. They failed to apologize F. D. R. And they were free saying as much in the presence of their husbands and escorts yesterday.

And, funny thing, the husbands agreed.

EACH WINS TWO.

Both Tech and Georgia, playing the eleventh game since the resumption of relations in 1925, have won two conference games this year. Georgia has lost three games in the conference and Tech four.

On the basis of comparative scores, one could work up quite an argument in favor of Georgia. Well, one can get together a favorable argument for Georgia anyway.

The Bulldogs hold an edge in the backfield, having the more experienced backs and being one, and all better runners and blockers. The edge goes to Georgia in kicking. And, funny thing, the husbands agreed.

'Purchase' of Browns Includes Texas Club

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 29.—(AP)—A syndicate's plan to purchase the St. Louis Browns of the American league also includes purchase of the team's lone farm, San Antonio, of the Texas league.

George Sisler, one-time manager of the Browns and a member of the syndicate, said tonight the minor league team was included in the contemplated purchase.

He gave no other additional details to his announcement last night that he and a group of St. Louis businessmen and sportsmen planned to buy the Browns.

Members of the syndicate have invited civic leaders to a meeting Monday to work out financial details of the offer to be made to the Phil C. Ball estate, owner of the two teams.

REPORT DENIED.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Louis B. Von Weise, of Montclair, N. J., president of the St. Louis Browns, today said he had heard nothing to the effect that the newspaper's account of the intentions of George Sisler and a group of St. Louis sportsmen and businessmen to try to purchase the American league club, Von Weise also is trustee of the estate of Phil Ball, owner of the two teams.

GOLDEN TORNADO.

Tech, of course, won that 1928 game along with all the rest on the schedule it being the year of the Golden Tornado.

Contributing factors point to the game today being one of the best of all time. Each team seeks the third conference victory. And the winner of the game has a highly successful season to come.

The seniors come to the end of the long four-year trail today—nine for Georgia and seven for Tech.

Bulldogs playing their final game include Co-Captains John Bond and John McKnight, the Toocoo stars; Allen Shuler, Moechell, Al Minot, Alex Ashford, H. C. Wagner, Charley Treadaway and Frank Johnson.

Tech's seniors are Hoot Gibson, Oscar Thompson, Fulton Brittain, Captain Lefty Eubanks, Billy Street, John McKinley and John Wilcox.

Gibson, alternate captain, will not play because of a injury contracted in a scuffle before the Florida game.

Georgia is figured one touchdown better than Tech. The underdog role again belongs to the Jackets. They'll go out for the kick-off at 2 o'clock.

There are some good seats left.

L. S. U. Heavily Favored Today Over Greenies

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 29.—(AP)—

Louisiana State University was the heavy favorite to defeat Tulane in the 33rd renewal of their annual rival football game here tomorrow starting at 2 p.m. A sell-out crowd of 32,000 fans was predicted.

L. S. U. defeated only by Rice in an open game, 10-7 this season, had its best squad in many years ready and in perfect shape with an expected bid to either the Sugar Bowl or Rose Bowl as the prize for defeating the Greenies.

S.M.U. and T.C.U. Battle Today for Likely Rose Bowl Bid

EXPERTS AGREE
TEXAS ELEVENS
WELL MATCHED

ChristiansBettingChoice.
Wilson-Baugh Duel in Prospect.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Nov. 29.—(P)—Undefeated and untied Southern Methodist and Texas Christian, candidates for the Rose Bowl classic, had their aerial machines tuned to-night for tomorrow's southwest grid classic here before nearly 40,000 fans.

It is regarded here as almost a certainty that the winner of the Southwest Conference championship battle will receive a prompt invitation to Stanford's New Year's Day at Pasadena.

At Dallas, Coach Matty Bell worked feverishly with the Methodists, running his makeshift Mustang backfield through daring pass formations. The jack rabbit legs of little Bobby Wilson, 147-pound halfback, carry the hopes of Mustang backers.

The piston right arm of Sammy Baugh, pass slinging sensation, and Tommie Lawrence's bulldog-like line thrusts were Texas Christian's best bets.

Outstanding coaches in the country over gathered tonight for the "natural." Among them were Ray Morrison, of Vanderbilt; until last year the ringmaster of the Methodist "aerial circus"; Lynn Waldorf, of Northwestern; John Heisman, of Indiana; D. A. Bible, of Nebraska, and Bernie Bierman, of Minnesota.

Hotel lobbies were filled with visiting sports writers from coast to coast.

Both teams have smothered 10 opponents and the records lean little to choose. The two men of Southern Methodist have allowed but three touchdowns—two of them on passes. The Christians likewise have anchored opposing backs.

Every member on the Christian squad is ready, said Coach Leo (Dutch) Myers.

The Methodist team that wallowed the University of California at Los Angeles 21-0, in an impressive Armistice Day appearance at Los Angeles, will be minus two of its stars in Harry Shuford, great fullback injured in the U. C. L. A. game, and J. C. (Iron Man) Wetsel, stellar guard.

Neiman coach has kept it a secret that passing will be the major offensive weapon.

The Christians' one-sided 27-6 defeat of Rice last week made them 2-1 favorites here but cautious experts, recalling the 19-0 licking Southern Methodist handed the Christians last year, think passing will be the major offensive weapon.

The record applications received today by the A. A. U. with the proper affidavits from Larry Snyder, Ohio State coach, show that on May 25 in the Big Ten championships at Ann Arbor, Mich., Owens tied the world mark of 9.4 seconds for 100 yards and shattered three other records.

Roche, the husky Pennsylvania coal miner, also is very adept at mixing it up in the rough-and-tumble variety. So fans can expect a lively grapple.

Tommy Marvin, the big Indian, will meet Leo (Whiskers) Savoie, one of the one-hundred-weights. Leo this time, Newman, will battle Sam Carter, of St. Louis, in the preliminary.

THE SOUTHWEST REPORTS.

(Copyright, 1935, for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

FORT WORTH, Texas, Nov. 29.—If you happen to live in California, New York or the midwest, you might be surprised to know how many football experts believe the two strongest teams in the country are meeting at Fort Worth Saturday.

The two teams are Southern Methodist from Dallas and Texas Christian from Fort Worth.

The experts base their opinions on both offensive and defensive strength—an attack that combines hard, fast running and high-class blocking, excellent forward passing and consistent kicking—a defense that features two big, aggressive lines that plow in on the split second, lines and ends that know their stuff, plus manpower that can move around.

This southwestern challenge has brought in football writers from every section of the country—from New York to Los Angeles—with the general idea of getting their own slants on the comparative merits of the southwest against the field.

The Yankee stadium or the Yale bowl couldn't provide seats for the crowd trying to see the Texan final.

Baugh, against Wilson, probably one of the main debates of the day.

The Army is playing the Navy. Princeton is tearing into Yale—Stanford is waiting on the west coast—a star Minnesota team has finished its season—but, in this vast empire of the southwest, Texas Christian and Southern Methodist are putting on the fanfare that counts as far as the cottonwood trail is concerned.

By Alan Gould.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(P)—The 1935 collegiate football season, alternately marked by heart throbs and headshakes, torn reversals and snowstorms, comes to a likely climax tomorrow in the east and south.

The farewell to November's boisterous campaign sparkles with the customary glamor of the Army-Navy classic at Philadelphia, where a brilliant battle for service supremacy looms for the benefit of a sell out crowd of 60,000. It also features crowning tests for three of the four surviving teams with spotless records, handfuls of traditional games, and the probable answers to outstanding post-season problems.

Texas Christian and Southern Methodist, each with 10-game winning streaks and eyes on the Rose Bowl, are looking for a 20-yard jaunt against the Sugar Bowl, the Tigers having only 50 yards to get reverse to the hands of the Elis last season. The consensus is that Princeton will say farewell to a great season with touchdowns before a crowd of 55,000 in the Yale bowl but Tiger adherents, remembering the 1934 debacle and the exploits of the "iron men," have their fingers crossed.

"Roughly" have Army and Navy been better matched than this year. The Cadets are picked to win, mainly because they have a better record against mutual opponents and a more effective starting team, but the Navy is much better equipped with reserves and apparently has come up to another "peak" for the game.

Holy Cross, with only a single tie to mar its otherwise conquering march, hopes to trim its ancient rival, Boston College, and entertain a bid to the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans. The Crusaders are favored, but can afford to take no chances against a team that sprung from the year's biggest upset, in beating Michigan State. Also, there's the fate of such other unheated teams as North Carolina, California, Marquette and New York University to consider, under similar circumstances.

For PITT, I doubt if any easterner, in fact, the southwest seems to be a training ground for coaches of other conferences and second string which are to be considered superior to Texas schools. Dana Bible from Texas Aggies to Nebraska, and Lynn Waldorf from Oklahoma Aggies and Kansas State to Northwestern. Not to mention the likes of these fellows in their new surroundings speak for itself, but all have been replaced by able, shrewd successors.

BUSINESS WOMEN QUIT DEFENSE OF MAXWELL

Knoxville Probers Declare
Patricide Had Fair Trial;
Protests Hit.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 29.—(UPI)—The Knoxville Business and Professional Women's Club announced its withdrawal today from a movement to raise a defense fund for Edith Maxwell, 21-year-old Wise, Va., school teacher, who is serving a 25-year prison sentence for slaying her father with a high-heeled slipper.

Miss Mary Elliott, president of the club, said more than $200 sent from all sections of the country would be returned to contributors.

The club's action was taken upon the return of four members of the club from a conference where they went to investigate the case and interview Miss Maxwell.

"Much to our surprise we found that the facts in the case did not at all justify the enormous amount of mail which has come to us, nor did we feel any need for financial aid from our organization," Miss Elliott and the others said in a joint statement.

The women, who had contracted with a newspaper syndicate giving it exclusive rights to interview and photograph the defendant, they said they were not permitted to interview her in jail.

The committee said it further found that "The defendant was accorded a fair trial, before an intelligent jury, and a judge whose decisions have seldom been reversed."

"That the manifestations of indignation concern from the public are out of all proportion to the actual facts in the case, and a great injustice has been done to all concerned—the defendant, her attorneys, the jury, the judges and the people of that beautiful community by the distorted and highly colored news reports emanating from sources which would seek to glorify crime for their own selfish purposes."

"The kindest thing that can be done," the women added, "is for the public to allow the orderly processes of the law to take their course without interference."

WIFE OF VAN VLACK IS FOUND MURDERED

Crushed, Bullet-Riddled
Body of Pretty Mildred Hook Discovered in Trap.

TWIN FALLS, Idaho, Nov. 29.—(UPI)—Two police officers announced tonight that Douglas Van Vlack had admitted killing his pretty divorce wife, Mildred Hook, 22, whose body was found in a culvert near here. She was found with her throat cut in the bathroom of her home by her sister. Police said they were told she had been "brooding over business."

Prosecutor Edward Babcock announced immediately that the state will charge the strapping former Washington University student with murder and demand the death penalty.

Discovery of the body, pinioned in the 16-inch culvert near here with the battered head protruding from the battered body, was the result of a search for a missing person.

Van Vlack was removed from Twin Falls to an unannounced jail today. He is charged with killing one Idaho officer and wounding another Monday as they sought to question him in the kidnaping.

Prosecuting Attorney Edward Babcock said he would await the result of an inquest in the girl's death before considering the possibility of additional charges against Van Vlack.

Investigation shows Miss Hook was with Van Vlack when the two officers were shot and was led into her death trap as her ex-husband fled Monday night after the gun battle.

Deputy Sheriff Orin Cynder said a bullet found near the young woman's body would fit a gun taken from Van Vlack.

The girl was shot through the left eye, a wound identical to the one that cost the life of State Patrolman Franklin Cooper in the encounter with Van Vlack.

Ralph E. Leighton, former chief of police, said he believed the assailant induced Miss Hook to crawl into the narrow tunnel, ostensibly for shelter and when her head was thrust from the end her arms pinned to her sides, battered her until she was unconscious.

At Lake Hot Springs, Idaho, Sheriff E. F. Prater said Van Vlack had been advised of the finding of the body and denied any knowledge of her death.

Miss Hook's father, Joseph Hook, 50-year-old ex-cowboy, writer of mystery and crime fiction, was near Colfax. Earlier today, however, he said he had "brought up hope of ever seeing her alive."

She was sought by Idaho officers as material witness against Van Vlack. Van Vlack's mother blamed his trouble upon his ex-wife. She said the young woman "kept sleepin' him" after the divorce action was filed, "talking to him for hours."

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 29.—(UPI)—Louis J. Passarini, 23, wants a college education so much that he is riding 54 miles three nights a week to get it.

Every Monday, Wednesday and Friday he leaves his home here at 4:15 p. m. and arrives at Springfield, Mass., 27 miles away, in time for first class at 7 o'clock. It usually is 11 p. m. by the time he is back home again.

In a record pedalling time between the two cities is one hour and 23 minutes. Recently, when he speeded up to better that mark, the front wheel struck a rock and he was catapulted over the handlebars. He showed up at class with a black eye and a sore knee.

He is employed as an accountant during the day.
